Hand Blended GREEN TEA

PURE SIP Green teas are whole leaf healthy teas produced out of the unopened apical bud and the first and second tender leaves, not allowed to oxidize after the harvest.

Hand Blended BLACK TEA

Black Tea is produced where the raw leaves are intentionally oxidized by more than 80%. The processing involves a very critical withering stage which consists of both physical and chemical mellowing which takes about 16 to 18 hours depending on the ambient humidity and temperature. This withering stage imparts a natural sweetness to the black teas and a very distinct flowery fresh aroma.

Hand Blended OO LONG TEA

Oolong Tea is a variety that is processed in such a manner that the oxidation level in the made tea will be anywhere between 40% to 70%. The flavor profile will be something in between a Green tea and a fully oxidized black tea.

Hand Blended YELLOW TEA

Yellow Tea can be viewed as a cooked version of green tea, where an additional sweating or heaping stage is involved which usually range from 24 to 30 hours.

Hand Blended WHITE TEA

White Tea is the minimally processed variety of tea where the very high-quality tender leaves are simply dried until the moisture reduces up to 4% or less and could be packed. White teas are just one notch above all the other varieties in that it's of the grade which in the industry jargon termed the Silver Needle, which entirely consists of unopened apical buds which will have a very fine coat of downy white hairs (Thus the name white tea).

A scenic view of a tea plantation on rolling hills under a hazy sky, with a cup of tea in the foreground. The hills are covered in lush green tea bushes, and the sky is a soft, hazy blue. In the foreground, a clear glass cup filled with amber-colored tea sits on a matching saucer, both resting on a piece of light-colored burlap fabric. To the left of the cup, a small sprig of fresh tea leaves lies on the surface.
